

Time zone difference with offshore developers

Offshore software outsourcing might seem like a complicated thing to handle; however, if you look closely, it is similar to having a third-party in the next building. But this one just works different shifts. For successful offshore software development, all you need - is a window for communication. An offshore team can start early and have work done for you to review or pick up where you left. Plus, the time-zone difference is a huge plus when we are talking about on-call product support.

Take a look at the chart below to see which locations have time slots that match your working hours.
